ENGLISH MIDLANDS BOMBED, ANOTHER SMASHING ATTACK

German Bombers Arrive In Waves at 10-Minute Intervals

ENGLISH BOMB REICH

Many Fires Started in Western Midlands, But Brought Under Control

By Robert G. Nixon
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(INS)—Arriving in waves at 10-minute intervals, German bombers delivered another smashing attack on the western section of England's midlands last night and early today, while British raiders pounded the Reich.

Later this morning London had a new daylight air raid alarm, the 360th the city has experienced since war began. It ended quickly, however, and no bombs were dropped.

The warning sirens rang when a squadron of German planes crossed several London districts. Anti-aircraft guns sent up an immediate barrage.

A brief air ministry announcement told of R. A. F. night attacks against the Reich. It said:

"R. A. F. bombers made attacks upon objectives in Germany last night."

For the most part in London the night was relatively calm as the German raiders concentrated on the midlands. But a number of bombs were dropped on the capital and anti-aircraft guns roared at intervals.

Four persons were trapped in a bus and two were killed when a bomb fell on one London section during the night attack. A house and shop were damaged and the lodge of a hospital was demolished. The all-clear signal ending the night alarm sounded at 8 a. m.

An air ministry communique said that while bombs were dropped on many parts of the country the main attacks were directed against the western midlands, where many fires were started but brought under control.

Many houses, business premises and other buildings were damaged, the communique stated, and a number of persons were killed and injured.

Hours after midnight the German raiders were still arriving over one western midlands city at brief intervals, where anti-aircraft defenses sent up a terrific barrage.

(Editor's Note: A German announcement said that Nazi planes staged an attack on the English midlands last night.)

YARDLEY RESIDENTS PLAN FOR CHRISTMAS LIGHTING

Four Prizes To Be Awarded By Lions Club During Approaching Season

COMMITTEE IS NAMED

YARDLEY, Nov. 23.—Residents of Yardley are beginning to hunt their Christmas lights and decorations, and at the same time are seeking new ideas and effects for this season's display.

Last year the Christmas decorations contest, sponsored by the Yardley Lions' Club, awarded three prizes for the outstanding displays.

The purpose of the contest, which is to stimulate a greater measure of pride in civic appearance, was realized to such an extent that the Lions are holding another contest this year, awarding $15, $7.50, $5 and $2.50, as first, second, third and fourth prizes, with several honorable mentions.

The judging will take place on an undesignated evening between December 25th and December 31st. Anyone living within the borough limits is eligible to compete, excepting business houses. Judges are being secured by Lion Robert B. Druck, and they will be men who are unfamiliar with the residences of the town.

The committee in charge of this year's contest includes: Charles F. Cook, chairman; F. C. Loderbach, Fred G. Satterthwaite, and James J. Colson.

Music and Oral Medal Contests Held by Y. T. C.

The Bristol Youth Temperance Council members acted as hosts to the entire Bucks County Youths' Temperance system last evening with groups from Yardley and Warrington as guests. The affair was held in Bristol Presbyterian Church.

James A. W. Killis, president of the State Y. T. C., showed moving pictures of the annual encampment held at Grantham.

Also introduced to the organizations were: Mrs. Elsie Nixon, of Newtown, the W. C. T. U. president; Mrs. Hooker, county treasurer of the W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Jane Stevens Dougherty, recording secretary, State Y. T. C.; Miss Harriet Kocher, state corresponding secretary. These gave a few words in welcome.

Following Mr. Killis' pictures, a music contest was held by the members of the Loyol Temperance Legion. This contest was won by a Yardley L. T. L. member, Miss Betty McLand.

After the music contest, an oral medal contest was held by the Y. T. C., it being won by William Fry, president of Bristol Y. T. C. The two contests were in charge of Miss Elizabeth Beswick.

Two vocal selections were given by a Yardley miss, Jane Miller, who was accompanied by her sister at the piano. The usual business was transacted and reports given. An invitation was extended by the Yardley Y. T. C. to the other two locals to attend a Christmas party at Yardley on December 30.

Refreshments of cocoa and cup cakes were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in group singing.

Another Bomb Attack

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Wrecking houses and causing some casualties, bombs fell on London today and two new air raid alarms were sounded as German and Italian planes launched daylight attacks against the British capital.

A brief morning alarm, during which bombs were dropped, was followed by a second—London's 361st—this afternoon. It also was of short duration.

Today's attacks, in which at least 60 German raiders participated with little success, followed a smashing attack on the western midlands during which German night raiders concentrated chiefly on one important industrial city.

In addition to the German planes, a formation of Italian fighters appeared over the Kent coast near the Straits of Dover. The Fascist craft were driven back by anti-aircraft fire.

During London's morning alarm, a dozen German bombers coming from the southeast were intercepted by British fighters. One German bomber was shot down and a second was believed destroyed.

A third German craft was hit by anti-aircraft fire and the Nazi formation broke up, dumping bombs which demolished the fronts of three houses.

APPEALS FOR GENEROUS RESPONSE TO RED CROSS

Demands Are Greater Upon Funds This Year Than In Some Previous Years

NOW IS THE TIME TO AID

The annual Red Cross roll call is progressing splendidly though Mrs. Frank Lehman, chairman, is hoping that the amount contributed by residents of this area will be considerably larger than that of last year. The demand, this year, exceeds that of many previous years in that both the army and navy have expanded and the civilian training camps will necessitate more contact with the home. This is a phase of work in which the Red Cross is exceptionally well fitted to perform.

In Bristol there are 83 workers who are canvassing the town at the present time. Mrs. Lehman is desirous of having all returns promptly given her, as the roll call concludes Thanksgiving Day, November 28th.

ARTIST COUPLE ENJOY REMODELED FARM HOUSE

Family Practically Lived In One or Two Rooms During Renovations

NOW A GREAT PLEASURE

TREVOSE, Nov. 23.—After years of down-right hard work, the Melzers, one of Trevese's artist families, are enjoying the beauty of the old farmhouse they remodeled.

For Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meltzer this is the reward of hardship and intense effort, following a dream they visioned years ago. For 10 years the family, composed of the artist father and mother, together with their two children, Jo-Ann, 8, and David, 11, practically lived in one or two rooms, doing their eating and painting in confined quarters. Now they are enjoying their new roomy structure, having completely rebuilt the farm house, the original part of which was built in 1829.

It has been a slow procedure doing this work. Most of the handwork and masonry was done by Mr. Meltzer and one assistant.

Many hardships and inconveniences were endured during the renovation period. But as Mrs. Meltzer put it: "We are both good sports about it because we were working on an ideal which we both wanted badly."

"We are so proud of everything, there's not a thing lacking now. Why."

Magician Mystifies The Bristol High Students

A magician of note, Principle Notates Mahajara, European court prestidigitator, held the Bristol high school students entranced yesterday afternoon, when he gave an excellent performance of his art in the high school auditorium.

Principle Mahajara used no "trick" apparatus, boxes or other paraphernalia, he stated, but mystified the pupils nevertheless with unusual performances such as making ice cream from napkins; breaking a watch and then locating the watch in the shoe of a pupil; revealing a secret third hand while his own hands were tied; placing a girl in a bag which students had previously examined, then releasing her without destroying the bag; and many others.

The other features of the assembly program included: patriotic selections by the orchestra; singing of a hymn followed by reading of Scripture; salute to the flag.

A pop rally was announced for Wednesday afternoon next at the Bristol Theatre, by Ned Egnal, manager of the theatre.

Famous Singer To Appear In Bristol Methodist Church

Homer Rodeheaver, Famous Leader of Song, Who was Evangelist Singer for the Late Billy Sunday, Will Conduct the Services at the Bristol Methodist Church, Sunday Evening, Beginning at 7:45

Rodeheaver, whose voice has thrilled millions, had a humble beginning on a farm in southern Ohio. He worked his way through school and college, and being naturally musical, always played some instrument, from the bass drum, before he was big enough to carry it, to the cornet which he played in Ohio Wesleyan University band.

One day a fellow student, finding himself broke, offered to sell his trombone to "Rody" for $7. That was the same trombone that accompanied him to the battle fronts of Europe during the World War and has thrilled thousands of listeners in meetings and over the air.

Having a magnetic personality, young Rodeheaver was chosen yell leader for his university. An evangelist visiting in that region needed a song leader and engaged him for the job. That started him on his evangelistic career. Billy Sunday heard him coax a Chautauqua audience in Winfield, Kan., into such an outpouring of song, he decided he had found a song leader after his own heart. They worked together 20 years, appearing in practically every large city in the United States. It is estimated Rodeheaver has directed over 70,000,000 in song.

EXONERATE DRIVER OF CAR IN WHICH THREE MET DEATH

Inquisition Into Tragedy Occurring at New Hope is Held Here

WAS NO CARELESSNESS

Crash Occurred On Sept. 30th, When Car Left Road, Hurdled Ditch and Hit Tree

Because there was no evidence presented to show that the driver of a station wagon in which three men were killed on September 30th, was careless or negligent, a coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Frank Burck, 27, New Hope, of blame for the tragedy.

The coroner's inquisition was held in the Bristol Municipal Building by Dr. H. Clayton Moyer, coroner of Bucks County; assistant by Dr. James P. Lawler, deputy coroner.

The jury was composed of James H. Brooks, foreman, Arthur P. Brady, John Bruden, Damon Johnson, Albert Leech, and John H. Gulick.

The three men killed in the one crash, when the station wagon went off the road and hit a tree on the River Road, Route 32, in New Hope Borough, at 2:15 on the morning of September 30th, were:

Earl F. Winters, 25, South Main street, New Hope.

Frank Rath, River House, New Hope.

A man known as James McCoy, River House, New Hope.

Dr. Lawler testified to being summoned by the Penna. Motor Police to the scene of the accident, where he found that three men had been killed.

The station wagon was overturned, was off the main highway and had crashed into a tree. "All three men," Dr. Lawler, told the jury died of fractured skulls and multi-internal injuries. The night was clear and the roadway dry. While the roadway is narrow Dr. Lawler said that he would not say that the spot where the crash took place was particularly dangerous.

Corporal R. D. Evans, in charge of Penna. Motor Police, South Langhorne, told

URGE TO ADVENTURE

When the Finnish freighter Martha Thorden docked in New York recently after a mine-dodging trip from Petsamo, ninety-six citizens of the United States and Canada who had volunteered to fight in the Finnish war against Russian aggression, disembarked. It was their first opportunity to leave Finland since peace was signed. Some had reached here too late to take part in the fighting. A few were disillusioned and wished they had not participated in the adventure.

America, as always in its history, is a big producer of soldiers for foreign wars, wars in which the United States is not a participant. This nation has furnished cannon fodder for both sides in many conflicts since 1935. There were Americans on the front lines with the Italians, and also in the ranks of the Ethiopians. When the Sino-Japanese war began in 1937, there were Americans who insisted on helping the Chinese through personal enlistment in their army and air force.

The Spanish civil war probably was most effective of all in stirring up volunteers in this country. The Franco forces obtained a few, but the Loyalists succeeded in enlisting large numbers; in fact, the rehabilitation of the returned volunteers necessitated many collections in their behalf. Quite a number of Americans went to Finland, and some journeyed overseas to help Poland and France against Germany. There are Americans now engaged in helping the British.

Numerous attempts have been made to discover the motivation for these enlistments in foreign wars. Probably as good a reason as any is the urge for adventure which is so strong in many individuals. In the distant future, historians will ponder over these times. It is easier to analyze the past than the present or the future. Historians, reading this century backward, may make many brilliant discoveries. They will profess to see certain links in events of today that are not contemporaneously apparent.

Perhaps they may even find also a link for those who yield to the call for adventure.

PATRIOTISM AND DEFENSE

The spirit and determination of the Greek soldiers in their fight against the Italian invaders is demonstrated in almost all reports that come from the Greek-Italian front. That the people of Greece are united in their stand against the aggressor perhaps may be taken for granted. But a dispatch from Athens telling of a letter sent to soldiers at the front portrays so clearly the patriotic fervor of the people at home that it is worth more than passing consideration.

This note, contained in a pack of cigarettes, said:

"Smoke these cigarettes, and if you happen to be my son I remind you of the blessings I gave you. If you do not return victorious, do not return at all to your father's house."

Not only is the sentiment expressed reminiscent of old Sparta, but it is indicative of the lofty spirit of patriotism engendered in a people of great traditions by the invasion of their homeland.

Adolf and Molotov have been pictured as a couple of realists, and the first crack out of the box after their conference they talk of "an understanding founded on mutual trust."

all I do is turn the spigot and there's water! It's a lot different from the time when I carried one bucket of water to the house and had to use it five different ways before discarding it. Not even then was it thrown away—the flowers finally got it."

The Meltzers are both artists and go to Philadelphia every day to teach at the Moore Institute. Two children, David, 11, and Jo-Ann, 8, complete the family. Besides going to classes every day, Mrs. Meltzer did her share of the work, cared for the children and many times had to finish a painting in the small kitchen working back to back with her husband.

The house as a finished product is early American in design and furnishings. Hand-hooked rugs, made by Mrs. Meltzer, knotty pine cupboards, huge fireplaces and plank maple floors. The beautiful long living room runs across the front of the house to command a view of the spacious terrace which is the family's pleasant spot for relaxing, reading and playing.

The antique furniture arrangement, style and color, have all been carefully selected.

"We have been married 13 years and we both have worked at our own particular line and neither has influenced the other in our work," Mrs. Meltzer specializes in still life. "I paint seasonal landscapes, or as Mr. Meltzer calls it "legitimate landscapes," said Mrs. Meltzer.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

That night when the roomer returned he was met on the steps by a detective who flashed a light on his face. Another policeman came across the street and stood impassively behind the young man.

"You are Edward Fleming?" asked the first.

The young man looked from one dark, forbidding shape to the other.

"Yes," he admitted.

"You'll have to come along with us."

"And if I refuse?"

"That would be too bad; we'd take you anyway."

"On what charge?"

"On suspicion of being concerned in the murder of Octavia Osborne at Lakelawn."

Later on a police car rushed Ted Fleming to Bradbury where he was lodged in a detention room at police headquarters. Early the following morning his father came to see him. Lawyer Fleming wore a long face as he looked at his son with mingled affection and anxiety.

"Well, my boy, this is a terrible business!"

"I know, Dad," said Ted nervously, running his fingers through his tousled hair. "But it isn't as bad as it looks, I swear!"

"I hope not; I most sincerely hope not."

Mr. Fleming placed hat, gloves and brief-case on the iron bed; then paced up and down the narrow cell. He sighed.

"You've given your mother and me an exceedingly trying time. Whatever you were up against, running away was the worst thing you could do. However— Let me hear the whole story."

When the story was told, Mr. Fleming took off his spectacles and polished them vigorously. He put them on again.

"Thank heaven, it's no worse!" he said, patting his son's shoulder. "I can't tell you what I had feared. Now we are going upstairs to see the Sheriff and I want you to tell him exactly what you've told me. No—on second thought, let me do the talking, as far as possible."

He sighed again, glancing oddly at Ted over the top of his spectacles.

"Your mother's a masterful woman, a very masterful woman. I've let her have her own way, more or less; I'm afraid I lacked the necessary stamina to stand up to her. In my case it's worked out fairly well on the whole, but if you let her run your life she'll almost certainly make a mess of it. Have a little gumption, my boy! Oh, well, it's your own affair."

"He rapped on the door; a constable came to let them out and conduct them upstairs. Sheriff Black was waiting for them in an office. Mr. Fleming greeted both officials pleasantly. Ted looked sheepish.

"The mountain labored and brought forth a mouse," quoted the lawyer, dropping into a chair and hitching up the knees of his trousers.

"When you've heard my son's story, gentlemen, I think you'll agree that he's behaved like a fool—but not a criminal."

"We'll reserve judgment on that point, Mr. Fleming," said Black noncommittally, "until we've heard the story."

He looked searchingly at Ted.

"Well, young man?"

Ted cleared his throat, glancing uneasily at his father.

"The suggestion that my son should leave for Washington the day following the murder," said the lawyer smoothly, "originally emanated from his mother. You don't know my wife, Sheriff? Well, to be perfectly frank, Mrs. Fleming has a habit of having her own way. She is a fond mother, perhaps over-fond, entirely devoted to Ted, who is our only son. We first heard of the murder late in the afternoon on which it was committed and, at dinner that evening, Ted announced that he intended to marry the eldest Osborne girl. His mother was horrified. Ted and Dorothy Osborne had always been the best of friends, but my wife had no idea that the attachment was warmer than friendship. She declared that the marriage could not be considered for a moment in view of the scandal in which the girl's whole family had suddenly become involved.

"Ted put up a fight, but I think I said—did I not?—that his mother has a habit of having her own way. Against my better judgment, I permitted myself to be enlisted on her side and we coerced Ted by every means in our power. After a heated discussion which lasted well into the night, Ted reluctantly agreed to go away for a few months. His understanding was that, by the time he returned, the scandal would have blown over and the marriage would then be more feasible. His mother's intention was to put a stop to the affair for good while he was gone.

"The following day, Sunday, my son left for Washington. On the train he thought over the whole situation and decided that, in yielding to his parents, he was being unfair to the girl he loved. He decided to take the next train home but, when it came to the point, he found that he could not do that. His mother had put it to him that, unless he broke with Miss Osborne for the time being at least, he would be estranged from us for good. Quite naturally, he felt that this was a prospect not lightly to be faced.

"He could not make up his mind what to do. His parents and his future—or the girl he loved? No easy choice, gentlemen. There was a train leaving for the shore resort where he was apprehended last night and, on a sudden whim, he took it. He wanted time to think, to make up his mind in peace."

"You stayed there for over a week, although you knew we were looking for you?" said Inspector Burrows sharply, scowling at Ted.

"I knew so little about the murder—and it was vital for me to settle my own problem."

"You've put us to considerable trouble and expense, young man," growled the Inspector. "And made the case against you a lot blacker than it was."

"Come, Inspector," said Mr. Fleming blandly, "you won't go as far as to say that there's a case against him? Isn't that putting it rather strongly?"

"Yes, I did go to the house about three days after the murder," Ted admitted, "but to say that my manner was suspicious is silly. I may have been a little nervous. You see, I was going to ask Mr. Osborne for permission to marry his daughter; and at a time like that a fellow naturally feels—"

"Quite," agreed Sheriff Black, "but if you went to see Mr. Osborne I should have thought your obvious course would be to ring the front doorbell and ask for him."

"But I knew I'd probably find him in the garden."

"No, he wasn't there."

"So you entered the house through the living-room windows," murmured Inspector Burrows casually—a little too casually.

Ted stared. "You're quite wrong. I didn't enter the house at all. I meant to go in that way; in fact, I was on the point of doing so, when I noticed the old lady sitting there and changed my mind."

"What about the scarf?" Burrows demanded fiercely. "You were carrying it when you approached the house; half an hour later, it was knotted tightly about the old lady's neck!"

The young man turned pale.

"I don't know how it got there. Dorothy came over to my house to play tennis shortly after lunch but she went home in a short while, with a headache. She left the scarf on a seat beside the court and, when I went over to see her father, I took it with me with the intention of returning it."

"When I turned away from the living room windows, I decided to go home and come back to see Mr. Osborne later. As I walked past the side of the house, I noticed that a window which opens into the hall was ajar. I put my hand through and tossed the scarf onto a chair."

There was some further questioning, after which the Flemings were permitted to depart, but Ted was cautioned that he must not attempt to leave the neighborhood again without permission from the police. When father and son had gone, Sheriff Black looked at Burrows with raised eyebrows.

"Well?"

"I think he's lying, Sheriff. Trying to protect his prospective father-in-law. There was more on his mind the week he was away than the problem of defying his parents, or he'd have reached a decision sooner. I really think he met Stephen Osborne in the garden and gave him the scarf to return to Dorothy. . . ."

En route to Lakelawn after leaving police headquarters, Ted drove his father's car, in his burning impatience keeping the speedometer needle quivering between the sixty and seventy marks. At his parents' house, he brought the big car to a sudden halt.

"You'd better come in for a minute, Ted," said Mr. Fleming quietly. "Your mother will want to see with her own eyes that you're all right."

"I'll be home later," Ted replied, driving off soon after his father left the car. Soon Ted was standing on the doorstep of Stephen Osborne's house, furiously ringing the bell.

The door opened and Hannah Gale's face appeared in the aperture. Dour and forbidding, it was the face with which she had greeted most callers of late; and few of them had been sufficiently bold to attempt to enter. Her expression relaxed at sight of young Fleming. She almost beamed.

"Master Ted! Well, I am pleased to see you. This will be a big load off Miss Dorothy's mind. Come in, come in! I'll tell her you're here."

"Thanks, Hannah. You're swell!"

To Hannah's mind the occasion called for something more dramatic than a formal announcement of a caller. She went to the foot of the stairs and in a stentorian voice belated:

"Miss Dorothy! It's Mister Fleming! Mister Edward Fleming's here, Miss Dorothy!"

A door opened on the upper landing and Dorothy came running downstairs.

"Ted! Then you're all right? The police have let you go? I was so afraid when your father let us know last night that they'd found you

Buick To Increase
Production of Motor Cars

FLINT, Mich., Nov. 23.—On top of record-breaking October production of 35,480 cars, which was the largest single month's volume in the company's experience, Harlow H. Curtice, president of the Buick Division of General Motors, today laid down a program of accelerated operations for the remainder of the year involving a substantial boost in manufacturing schedules and the largest fourth quarter in the history of the company.

The executive announced that, effective immediately, assemblies will be boosted to around 1,700 cars a day, a jump of more than 100 cars a day over the previous production schedule. Fourth quarter production will be raised to approximately 133,000 cars against 90,267 built in the corresponding period last year. Output of 1941 models, since their introduction in September will reach 140,000 by the end of the year, compared with 111,000 of the 1940 models produced through the same period last year.

Mr. Curtice said that peak payrolls for the remainder of the year of approximately $6,000,000 is in addition to $28,800,000 paid to an average of 15,000 employees since January 1st and will contribute to the largest annual wage disbursement ever made by this manufacturer — in the neighborhood of $35,000,000.

Decision to raise the production rate resulted from the strong demand for the new models and the outlook for continued heavy sales next year, he said. The high levels of operation are scheduled to continue through the winter months with little change in productive volume or employment.

Paralleling record breaking manufacturing schedules during the month, October retail deliveries by Buick dealers also were the largest for any single month in the company's experience, totalling over 33,400 cars. At the same time, new orders taken during the month exceeded actual deliveries and the company entered November with a heavy backlog of business.

The increase in operations, involving additional shifts and maximum working hours, will result in the production of 67,700 cars during November and December and places Buick on a model year basis of more than 350,000 cars. For the 1940 calendar year, output will have totaled approximately 313,000 cars.

TEMPTING FOOD FOR THE CONVALESCENT

Preparing meals for a convalescent member of your family is a definite challenge to your ingenuity—you want the meal to intrigue the not-too-enthusiastic appetite and at the same time build him up to sparkling health. And in order to give yourself time for certain little extra touches which make mealtimes interesting for the patient, you have to plan his meals so you can prepare certain of his dishes along with the family's fare.

But there are compensations—you get real pleasure out of watching your patient grow stronger day by day and finally go back to his regular activities. You find you have some helpers you hadn't counted on as well. There are prepared strained foods, for example, that play such an important part in the diet of the modern infant. They are excellent to serve the patient who is allowed only soft foods. When it comes to planning dishes which are good for both an active family and a convalescent, you can count on these strained foods making such tempting dishes as vegetable custards and soufflés and strained fruit desserts which everyone enjoys. The family finds it no hardship to be served such attractive foods and they are particularly good for the patient because they are a combination of health-giving milk and eggs with foods which furnish a maximum of vitamins and minerals.

Prepared strained foods eliminate the task of cooking and sieving which is necessary in order to have the fruits and vegetables easily digested by the convalescent for whom the doctor recommends a soft diet. Furthermore, they are foods which have been hurried to the preparation kitchens at the peak of their perfection, where they are cooked and sieved with special equipment in the absence of air. Thus they retain the highest possible proportion of their minerals and vitamins.

These foods—13 different kinds of vegetables, fruits, meats and cereals—lend themselves admirably to the making of various interesting dishes which everyone enjoys. The following menu composed of dishes made from prepared strained foods will delight the family as well as the patient.

If you wish, you might substitute scrambled eggs and bacon for the poached egg on toast cubes and perhaps add a salad for the well members of the family. It has lots of color and variety to please the palate of the most temperamental patient.

LOCAL BOYS HIT STRIDE IN FAR AWAY GRID SPOTS

Van Lenten A State End of Promise As A Sophomore

YEAGER HAS BIG YEAR

Cole, Cut Adrift By Eagles, Still is Regarded High

By Jack Gill

At times during the rapidly fading football season, Lower Bucks County boys tinted the gridiron with colorful accomplishments. One in particular, Wilbur Van Lenten, a Bristol resident playing his first season as a sophomore at Penn State, has surprised those who followed his active career at Bristol high school a few years ago.

Although he graduated from the Cardinal building and plays baseball in the Bristol Twilight League with local teams, Van Lenten actually hails from Edgely.

Hordes of local grid devotees, down to see the Morrisville battle of the century between Yeager and White, forgot to take a squint or think about Van Lenten. Incidentally, the game was advertised as a Temple-Penn State affair.

The rangy Bristol performer sat on the bench during most of the play, but got in late in the fray to split Temple's great Tomasic behind the line of scrimmage. It was all White and Yeager, however.

A week later, still undefeated, Penn State met South Carolina's fighting gamecocks in an under-rated affair. Barely sliding through to a 12-9 decision, State's two touchdown squeeze was made a bit more comfortable by Van Lenten. On the same type of play that made Cornell's great Bud Holland an all American end a few years back, Van Lenten took an end around and scooted 12 yards for a score.

Last week he added an extra point to the Nittany Lions' total against N. Y. U. Breaking into the line-up in college football today is a slow procedure that pays its largest dividends during the senior year. VanLenten, a slow starter, of average proportions this campaign, has been coming along amazingly fast during the latter part of the season for a second year man.

He may or may not see action today as Penn State invades Pittsburgh in a do-or-die attempt to tame the Pitt Panther. For 21 years, Penn State has failed to beat Pitt in its own backyard. According to the breaks, Van Lenten's insertion demands either a breeze or a squeeze. That he has done so well on a good undefeated Penn State team is a remarkable accomplishment in itself.

Another Bristol griddier, Johnny "King" Cole, recently let loose by the Philadelphia Eagles, immediately hooked up with Passyunk Square, of the Eastern League.

Cole, a former star around Star of Heine Miller's St. Joseph College eleven, was playing his second year in big time ball after a year's absence from the Eagles' ranks. Always a hard player and a loyal trainer, his release in no way detracted from his ability or willingness to play ball.

One of the best place kickers in Philadelphia, it was the opinion of many of the sports leading strategists that Cole could serve the Eagles well with his fine defensive play and could be used to scoring advantage in spot insertions where his skill at booting field goals is well known. The Eagles, with no offense or line of outstanding ability, never even got close enough to opponents' scores to win by a field goal. Fast getting nowhere, a flock of players were cut adrift by Bert Bell's lower expenses.

Immediately signing up with Passyunk Square, who welcomed him with open arms, the "King" again became a member of the team he led to a 1939 championship in tough competition. There were others who carried this sections calibre rather highly. Jim Yeager was probably the best of the entire lot. Going great guns at Temple as a sophomore, the burly Morrisville kid scored the touchdown that tied Holy Cross last week, 6-6, on a power plunge from the nine yard stripe.

Sam Schiffer was a 60 minute man at Springfield, whose success this year was limited to but a few triumphs. The Massachusetts college is the former stamping ground of Coach Bill Dougherty, Langhorne's Bob Corrigan, a light but rugged lineman, played many minutes at guard for Notre Dame's B squad until he broke an ankle two weeks ago in a scrimmage against the varsity. Craig White, handicapped by an injured shoulder, started practically every game at left halfback for Penn State. Danny Di-Midio saw much action as a state yearling fullback.

2 MAJOR HOCKEY CLUBS TO PLAY IN CROYDON

CROYDON, Nov. 23—The fast-skating wheelers of the Croydon Ramblers hockey club will hook up in a pair of games this week-end, which promises plenty of thrills and action.

Tonight the Ramblers will engage the Pottstown hockey club in a Penn-New Jersey League game, which will begin at 10:30 o'clock.

Sunday evening, the Washington Eagles, of Washington, D. C., will be in attraction at Croydon. This team, presently, is leading the District of Columbia Roller Hockey League. This game will begin at 7:30 o'clock, before a regular skating session, so that the Croydon team can get an early start for home.

The Pottstown game is the one the Ramblers are primed for, because they will win this game in order to stay at the top of the Penn-New Jersey league. However, Coach "Pop" Keene's entire Rambler squad of players are in good physical condition after the waning battle of last week, which they won at Audubon.

Roller hockey is the only major sport in this section that brings teams to this district from far and wide.

JUENGER WILL MANAGE HARRISBURG BASKETEERS

Announcement has been made to the effect that Steve Juenger, former coach of the Bristol High School has been selected to manage the Harrisburg basketball team, of the Tri-County Professional League.

The announcement was made by James A. Lane, owner of the Harrisburg team's franchise.

Juenger is a former Temple University star and coached Bristol High for two seasons.

SUNDAY GAME BRINGS 2 ZEFFERIES TOGETHER

The football game tomorrow afternoon on Leedom's field will bring together two former players, and brothers, of the old Bristol Recs team in the Zefferies boys. Jupe has been coaching the Bensalem team this season, and has done a good job of it, while Pankle is the mentor of the Bristol A. A. team which, after a poor start, has come along nicely in the last three games against Frankford, St. Benedict, and Trenton Rams.

The A. A. team started out with a green team, playing away against heavier opponents, losing the first few games, at the same time giving Coach Pankle Zefferies a good line on the talent he had on hand. So he added Pat McGee, former center on the old Recs team, who is considered one of the best linemen in this locality, moving Buck Proby to tackle alongside of John Cocordas, former Bristol high star.

Ed Bartle was brought back into the game after a year's rest and took the guard position vacated by Proby, teaming with Teddy Sak, the former star at Bristol high school. The A. A. has the best set of ends in this locality in Calone, of last year's St. Ann's team; Buttsy Plebana, of last season's Recs team, and Pug Biancosi. Coach Zefferies has about ten extras for replacements, in Cassett, formerly of Southern High, Mays, of St. Ann's; Lemon and Kirsten, formerly of Bensalem high; Gene Mount, formerly of Bristol high. The backfield is improving each week.

Coach Zefferies certainly made a good move when he made Dugan, a former end at Bristol high, into one of the best passing backs ever seen around Bristol.

The blocking backs are Buddy Breslin, formerly of the Recs, and St. Ann's; and Johnny Dougherty, who calls the plays and runs blocks and kicks for the A. A. team. At the full-back post is Terry McGovern, 145 pounds of real TNT when he hits the line. The other backs are: Ott Grimes, formerly of Bristol high; Vincent McGee, a local find; and Carman Orino, the former prizefighter, who are playing their first season of football.

KENSINGTON CARDINALS TO OPPOSE DIAMOND XI

The Kensington Cardinals of the Northeast Conference will furnish the opposition of the Diamond Sporting Club tomorrow afternoon on Michell's field, Andalusia. Kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock sharp.

The Cards present a serious threat to the seven-game winning streak of the Big Green. In their last two contests, the Kensington boys have deadlocked Glenside and beaten "Toots" Pennacino's Willow Grove team. The Cardinals have a strong aerial attack which they expect to function from the starting whistle until the close.

Diamond has already clinched the Lower Bucks County championship and does not intend to let the invaders spoil their chances of meeting Doylestown for the Bucks County championship. The Diamantians hold victories over Bristol, Falls Alumni, and South Langhorne of this section and have also won over Norristown, North Philadelphia, Holmesburg, and Philadelphia Vagabonds. Their lone defeat was at the hands of Norristown which was the opening tilt of the season.

Coach Diamanti has several "banged-up" players which may hinder him from starting his full strength club. "Eddie" Roberts, stellar end, has an injured thumb. Murphy's ankle still pains him while Cunningham is bothered with his shoulders. McFarland received several nasty bumps last week but feels in shape to play.

Diamanti intends to use the following line-up at the start: Swadis and Dysart, ends; Gullatto and Smith, guards; Smuck and Ridge, guards; Fisher, center; Orazi, quarterback; Midge and Harper, halfbacks; Belinski, fullback.

S. LANGHORNE ACES TO BATTLE FALLS ALUMNI

Convinced that it is playing the brand of football that the sport lovers of this section wish to see, the Falls Township Alumni will meet another intersectional rival tomorrow afternoon, playing the South Langhorne Aces at Island field, Morrisville.

The Alumni team has dropped its last two games to the Trenton Eagles and Diamond, respectively. But both of these tilts were so close that victory wasn't decided until the final minutes of the contests. Thus far, the Alumni ledger shows three wins, four losses, and a deadlock. The Falls boys must take over South Langhorne to even the percentage.

Coaches Doherty and DeRisi held but one practice this week and have their fingers crossed because of injuries and sickness. Cappiello and Mannsman are out because of injuries while Nealey and Duerr have been on the sick list. It is doubtful whether Cappiello will be able to play the remainder of the season.

The Falls coaches are having end trouble. In last Sunday's tilt, they had two inexperienced ends playing the wing positions in Abate and Gene Rist. For a while, they even were forced to use Wood at end. All gave a fine account of themselves, despite the lack of experience at the post.

South Langhorne has dropped but one tilt this season, losing to Diamond on a forfeited contest when Coach Carter called his team off the field because of a disputed decision. The game was against Diamond which was leading at the time, 6-0.

Opening kickoff takes places at 2:30 o'clock.

Cleveland, Nov. 23—A bomb explosion early today ripped out a section of the rear wall and shattered windows in Stouffer's Playhouse Square restaurant in downtown Cleveland, following by little more than 24 hours the bombing of a Philadelphia restaurant of the Stouffer chain.

J. Louis Reed, assistant manager of the restaurant, was cut on the head by flying glass. There were no other injuries.

Police said the bomb probably was made of black powder and had been placed in the rear doorway. A police prowl car passing the rear of the place at the time was almost overturned by the concussion.

The establishment is one of a chain operated in Cleveland, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Detroit.

Testimony of the Stouffer brothers was largely responsible for conviction in 1938 of Don Campbell and John McGee, Cleveland labor union leaders on charges of extortion. Vernon Stouffer testified he had paid the pair of $1,200 after threats of bombings and window breakings at the time the restaurant bombed today was under construction.
